Clarke, and the alto Miss Nellie Louise Woodbury, both of Boston. Mr. T. E. Clifford, a famous baritone soloist, has also been engaged. Miss Hadley, the reader who was here last year, is also to attend.

Mr. Longway of this village, who might do an honorable and paying business, has done himself and others considerable harm, as he came here by drink and selling liquor. Some days since, not finding the stuff here, he got a young fellow and went to Gustin's, near the Bartlett mill, procured some liquor, and hid it in his room, and came home the last mile on foot, having tipped over and been left by a horse that was more sober and more intelligent than he were. The State's Attorney was informed and they had a warrant issued for his arrest. He was taken to jail, and his property was sold. He was released on $1000 bail, and he got a job and a few months' board at the Work House. On Christmas day some parties at So. Barton celebrated by expressing in a little liquor, getting drunk and making fools of themselves. They came down to the State's Attorney's office, paid fines and costs, amounting, all told, to about $100. The boys who must be drunk once in a while in order to be happy, and those who care to engage in liquor selling, are liable to find the business expensive as well as disreputable. Mr. Miles is not a man to be trifled with in the matter of violating the liquor law. He will go straight ahead in this line, as with all criminal matters, and it will be well for those who break this law to "stand from under," we predict.
